A prestigious and stimulating environment

FFJ was created within the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) of the University of Paris, in collaboration with the Collège de France and the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS) and will be relocated to the Campus Condorcet, an international school within the research community and higher education in France. In 2020, the environment of FFJ will bring together colleagues by international standards. FFJ wishes to continue its mission to extend its network of partners within the extra-academic sectors. To highlight this network and to foster cooperation between its members, in November 2019, we launched the Cercle de la FFJ, which will organize an annual meeting and publish a bi-annual Parlamentaire Series of international events.

Achievements since 2009

- 69 Visiting researchers
- 47 Publishing articles
- 68 Research contracts
- 3 370 400 Total funding

Promoting an open approach

In Bernhard Größ, the FFJ has focused on an interdisciplinary approach (including economics, sociology, political science, urban planning, anthropology...) in scientific research that shows strong international interest. The creation of the internationals research chairs and its participation in different projects expanded collaborations to countries outside Europe.

Our research themes

- Asian capitalism: Diversity and institutional change
- Re-exploring the world and breaking down barriers between cultural areas
- Thinking innovation through the interactions between Science, Culture, and Society
- Rethinking Global Cities: Global Issues and Local Practices
- International conferences and workshops

Our research focuses on inequality and social policies.

Visiting researchers

One of the core missions of FFJ is to welcome outstanding researchers, as well as other international researchers, and to support them in their work. What makes our approach distinctive is to allow them to develop their own projects and to collaborate with colleagues from another country or from another discipline.

Research workshops

- "Understanding Inequalities and Social Policies"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"

Promoting an open approach

In Bernhard Größ, the FFJ has focused on an interdisciplinary approach (including economics, sociology, political science, urban planning, anthropology...) in scientific research that shows strong international interest. The creation of the internationals research chairs and its participation in different projects expanded collaborations to countries outside Europe.

Our research themes

- Asian capitalism: Diversity and institutional change
- Re-exploring the world and breaking down barriers between cultural areas
- Thinking innovation through the interactions between Science, Culture, and Society
- Rethinking Global Cities: Global Issues and Local Practices

International conferences and workshops

FFJ organizes scientific events in Europe and Asia with local universities and research institutions.

Crosscutting research projects

- Globalization Studies: Update Perspectives on the Diversity of Capitalism
- International Economic Relations: Security in Europe and Interdisciplinary Approaches
- International Conference: "The Future of Social Sciences" (2020-2022)
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "Recent local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."

Our research focuses on inequality and social policies.

Visiting researchers

One of the core missions of FFJ is to welcome outstanding researchers, as well as other international researchers, and to support them in their work. What makes our approach distinctive is to allow them to develop their own projects and to collaborate with colleagues from another country or from another discipline.

Research workshops

- "Understanding Inequalities and Social Policies"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"

Promoting an open approach

In Bernhard Größ, the FFJ has focused on an interdisciplinary approach (including economics, sociology, political science, urban planning, anthropology...) in scientific research that shows strong international interest. The creation of the internationals research chairs and its participation in different projects expanded collaborations to countries outside Europe.

Our research themes

- Asian capitalism: Diversity and institutional change
- Re-exploring the world and breaking down barriers between cultural areas
- Thinking innovation through the interactions between Science, Culture, and Society
- Rethinking Global Cities: Global Issues and Local Practices

International conferences and workshops

FFJ organizes scientific events in Europe and Asia with local universities and research institutions.

Crosscutting research projects

- Globalization Studies: Update Perspectives on the Diversity of Capitalism
- International Economic Relations: Security in Europe and Interdisciplinary Approaches
- International Conference: "The Future of Social Sciences" (2020-2022)
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "Recent local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."

Our research focuses on inequality and social policies.

Visiting researchers

One of the core missions of FFJ is to welcome outstanding researchers, as well as other international researchers, and to support them in their work. What makes our approach distinctive is to allow them to develop their own projects and to collaborate with colleagues from another country or from another discipline.

Research workshops

- "Understanding Inequalities and Social Policies"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"

Promoting an open approach

In Bernhard Größ, the FFJ has focused on an interdisciplinary approach (including economics, sociology, political science, urban planning, anthropology...) in scientific research that shows strong international interest. The creation of the internationals research chairs and its participation in different projects expanded collaborations to countries outside Europe.

Our research themes

- Asian capitalism: Diversity and institutional change
- Re-exploring the world and breaking down barriers between cultural areas
- Thinking innovation through the interactions between Science, Culture, and Society
- Rethinking Global Cities: Global Issues and Local Practices

International conferences and workshops

FFJ organizes scientific events in Europe and Asia with local universities and research institutions.

Crosscutting research projects

- Globalization Studies: Update Perspectives on the Diversity of Capitalism
- International Economic Relations: Security in Europe and Interdisciplinary Approaches
- International Conference: "The Future of Social Sciences" (2020-2022)
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "Recent local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."

Our research focuses on inequality and social policies.

Visiting researchers

One of the core missions of FFJ is to welcome outstanding researchers, as well as other international researchers, and to support them in their work. What makes our approach distinctive is to allow them to develop their own projects and to collaborate with colleagues from another country or from another discipline.

Research workshops

- "Understanding Inequalities and Social Policies"
- "A recent, local and historical approach to inequality..."
- "German Reunification: A long-term perspective on the effect on gender..."
- "Rapport de l'expertise d'expertise d'expertise"
- "Topics of current interest for the 21st Century"